ENVIRONMENT, LESSON OF THE SOWER PARABLE

Rev. Loren M. Edwards
Preaches Powerful Sermon
at Methodist Church.

The Rev. Loren M. Edwards, in the pulpit of the Memorial First M. E. church Sunday morning, discoursing on the parable of the sower, designated that immortal story-lesson of the Saviour as the parable of environment, exhorting the sower to go forth to sow, unstintingly, and the reaper to reap joyfully. And, closing, the pastor paid his need of tribute to the toiler and the parable in these words, viz.:

"But oh Toiler, who can change the soil and build it up and clear it out and make it fit for sowing and rich for reaping, remember this parable is for you, to strengthen your hand and encourage your heart."

Clasping with sympathetic grasp the hand of the investigator and experimenter in the realm of social and experimental psychology, Rev. Edwards emphasized that "Back of the wayside path are the footsteps of men and beasts, and back of their footsteps the maze of human interests and impulses that made the highway traveled road that it was. Back of the shallow plaster of soil upon the rock were the convulsions of nature which tore from their parent bed those pieces of rock and the erosive forces which ground and pulverized them. And back of the thorns lying under the furrow was an eccentric history of advance and decay, for thorns are only degenerated leaves. While back of the varieties and grades of productive soil is a history packed with industry and interest. For nature has had her agents of fertilization at work, while the husbandry of man has helped or hindered, enriched or impoverished the ground."

Referring to the needs of, and the agencies already contributing for the improvement of conditions in various realms of endeavor, and especially the plight of the unproductive of religious labor in certain communities, ascribed by some to be due to community traditions and conditions, Doctor Edwards asked the question, "What is a church for if not to revise traditions and reconstruct standards and regenerate the moral and religious life of the community?"

"This is the situation, therefore, this must be faced as a practical proposition, namely: that much of the sowing of spiritual seed produces no result at all or else indifferent or negligible or unsatisfactory results. One of the reasons, and perhaps the outstanding reason suggested in the parable is contained in the word environment, not to be taken as a total when applied to practical Christian work, but worthy of emphasis here."

"The spiritual interests must be made so to dominate the life of a community that society and business and industry and politics are all typed by Christian ideals and customs and aims."
